Creating Unity, Empathy, & Understanding

July is BIPOC (Black, Indigenous, and People of Color) Mental Health Awareness Month. With major barriers to mental health access and events like COVID-19 still rippling through the U.S., the communities with fewer resources have been hit the hardest. The unfortunate reality is not everyone has equal access to mental healthcare resources. The implications of not realizing and acting on this issue today is that someone who is struggling with depression might not receive the help they need tomorrow. By raising awareness of this issue, we can bring more unity, empathy, and understanding to the mental health conversation.

Every patient should know all their treatment options and have equal access.

Mental health in underserved communities is a topic that's important all year, not just for one month. Utilizing NeuroStar's materials will drive diversity and inclusion within your practice, creating a welcoming environment for all your patients.

What can you do:

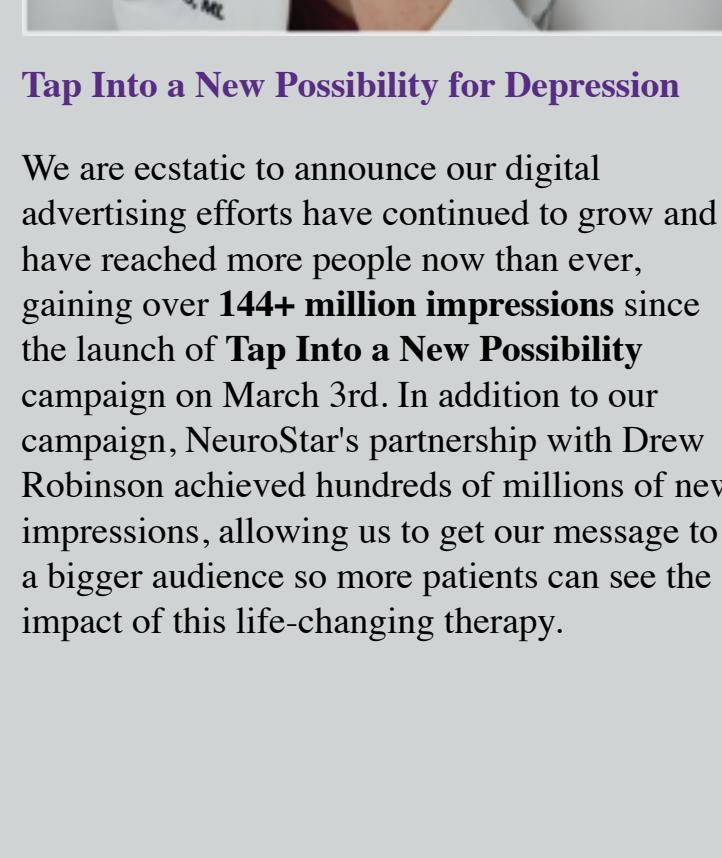

- Encourage your staff to check out BIPOC resources and see what you can do
- Follow NeuroStar's social channels to receive the latest updates and social media content
- Share insights and stories on what mental health awareness means to you, your patients, and your community. Share a quote or a video by emailing jennifer.riker@neurostar.com.

Dr. Melissa Shepard Returns

Dr. Melissa Shepard is back on TikTok this month spreading awareness for NeuroStar and the barriers on mental health within our communities. It's important to know how common it is so we can show patients they are not alone.

Did you know mental illness affects...

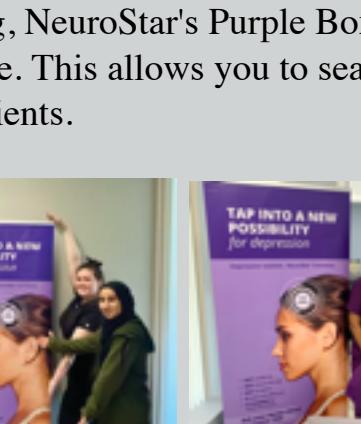

- 13% of Asian adults
- 17% of Black adults
- 15% of Hispanic / Latinx adults
- 25% of multi-racial adults

NeuroStar University (NSU)

The first of its kind for mental health, NeuroStar University (NSU) is a state-of-the-art training center in Charlotte, North Carolina. NSU is launching in August and will be teaching practices how to achieve the best clinical outcomes and market their NeuroStar business, so that more patients learn about NeuroStar TMS. Reach out to your PDM for more details and how you can attend NSU.

TrakStar Tip of the Day: Adding your practice name and logo to TrakStar

Be sure to add your practice's name and logo to TrakStar for personalized PHQ-10 surveys and reporting. Add your name and upload your logo in the Report Information section you'll find under the Tools tab > Settings > Customization.
